Patrol Announces Stricter Traffic Law Enforcement

More traffic law violators will be saying "Good morning, judge" after June 1, when a new California Highway Patrol enforcement policy goes into effect. Patrol headquarters predicted today. Under the new ruling, enforcement activity will be increased and the issuing of written drivers' warnings, which require no court appearance, will be discontinued.

Written drivers' warnings have generally been used in borderline cases where an unsafe practice is observed. "From now on," Caldwell, "there will be no borderline cases. If an unsafe driving practice involves a violation—and most of them do—a citation will be issued."
